Teachers Endangering Their High Position

For many generations, teachers have stood in highest regard in the United States. They have been given much praise and for them there has been little criticism and no condemnation. Their opinions have been given the greatest consideration.

This position was reached through integrity, through high principles, through working with heart and soul for the benefit of their pupils, through staying largely out of politics, through considering their profession a sacred calling, through devotion to duty, first

Not many years ago the pay of teachers was extremely low and when this was pointed out, the public realized the fact and agreed that the teachers were underpaid and should have increases in salary. In a span of about 15 years, one teacher who started at a salary of $60 a month is now making between $7,000 and $8,000 a year.

The teachers' plea that they were underpaid yielded good returns, several times over. It worked so well that it has been repeated again and again.

Increased pay for teachers was deserved and most people were glad to see them get it.

But there is one thing that is disturbing and that threatens to topple the teachers off the high pedestal they have occupied so long.

That is an apparent determination to dictate fiscal policies, to decide how much pay teachers shall receive and, worse, to decide which specific industry shall be forced to pay for the continually increasing salaries.

The decision of the United School Committee to try to force the state legislature to increase the gas-gathering tax by 50 per cent to provide money for teacher pay increases is simply another step in the course of self-destruction of the prestige and respect which the teaching profession heretofore has enjoyed.

The decision of the United School Committee, which includes representatives of each of the eight professional education organizations in the state, will be placed before the house of delegates of the Louisiana Teachers Association at the June 1 meeing and doubtless will be adopted.

Such action as this has brought public respect and support for the teaching profession to a new low, starting with the first session of the legislature under the new Long administraone industry or any specific industries the load of providing additional salaries for teachers is presumptive and is an entry by the teachers into the field of politics in such a way as to undermine the respect that has been built up for this profession.

Heretofore immune, or virtually so, from criticism, the teachers are adopting "tooth and claw" tactics in their demand for more pay. Like begets like, and the teachers may well realize that once they enter the "tooth and claw" arena, these same weapons will be used against them. Teachers have no right to say what taxes shall be assessed or who shall pay them. Once they attack the fiscal earnings of any industry or business, they must expect attack in return.

Monroe is proud that among the tiny group of teachers refusing to go along with the majority in the demand for control of state fiscal affairs was a local teacher, Mrs. Austin Miller. Others among the group were 'C. L. Perry, assistant superintendent of Caddo parish schools, who resigned from the L. T. HELD FOR QUESTIONING—Dennis Weiss, 17, (left), blood streaming down his face, was brought into Ramsey County Sheriff's office at St. Paul, Minn., for questioning in connection with the strangulation death of his great grandmother, Mrs. Ane Pedersen, 90, with whom he lived. The officers are taking off the handcuffs. Police said Weiss was cut when he jumped from rafters in the shed where he was captured. Deputy Sheriff Roger Johnson, 37, is critically wounded in Ancker Hospital from four 38-caliber slugs, which Deputy Harold Berger said were fired by Weiss when they attempted to bring the boy in for questioning about Mrs. Pedersen's death.
